the LAMONTAGE™ process

HOW IS IT DONE?

Liora Manné's fabrics, wall coverings and rugs are created through her patented needle punch process. Polyester fibers are hand punched with a needle, much like the ancient art of felting to create a design. These small hand needles are used to poke the fibers which bind them together, meaning the needle punching pushes the fibers through each other making the fibers attach. After the hand punching is complete, the fabric is put through a large needle punching machine which presses the fibers, flattening them and securing them together. No glue or sewing is used. Once the fabric has been completely needle punched and passed out of the machine, it is coated with a binder for durability and nano silver particles are added making it antimicrobial. It is this process which makes the product mildew free and stain resistant.

Liora Manné has created artistic, durable and healthy products that can be used for hospitality, universities, museums, libraries, corporate spaces and much more. The possibilities are endless.

ABOUT LIORA MANNÉ

Born in Israel, educated in the United States and now a true New Yorker, lifestyle products designer Liora Manné has been a study in breaking the rules from early in her career. After graduating from Georgia State University with a degree in journalism and drama, Liora was anticipating a life in the theatre. Then a textile design class at North Carolina State University changed the course of her career. She became fascinated by the potential impact of cutting edge technology on textile design. Her explorations resulted in ground-breaking advances while she pursued a master's degree in both textile design and textile engineering.

From her beginnings as a textiles designer, she soon gravitated towards home fashion in general and rugs in particular. Her entry into the area rug business truly changed the directions of the industry. Bold, contemporary colors sparked a revolution in a category dominated by traditions. Today, Liora Manné's LAMONTAGE™ products are featured worldwide.
